BISOUS BISOUS is AMAZING. I worked for a Parisian trained pastry chef and became a pastry snob so believe me when I say the almond croissants here (along with their other detectible offerings) are one of the few places in the USA (literally) that gets them right. Add in the top of the line service, overwhelmingly welcoming atmosphere, and cute dog-friendly patio...I would give them 100 stars if Yelp allowed it. I drive over an hour each way on a regular basis to buy goodies from here and know I'm not the only one!

Please note, this cafe is in a trademark/legal battle with Bisous Dallas, which is down the road, completely unaffiliated, and unfortunately caused tons of confusion amongst reviewers. BISIOUS BISIOUS, this amazing bakery, owns the name and is being unintentionally harmed by confused reviewers. Please support this amazing local business...you'll be so glad you did and want to post your own 5-star review!!!

Overall my experience here was pretty average. There was a bit of a wait time and the staff seemed a little new so the service could have been better. There was also a beverage on the menu that was no longer available. Tried the pistachio and chocolate eclairs, the pistachio one was good the chocolate one was just okay. Also walked away with an iced mocha which was okay too.

Overall the storefront is cute and the pastries look good but the taste and service were both just okay.

A truly hidden (Apple Maps didn't even lead me to the correct place) gem.

This place has French pastries you don't normally see (looking at you, pistachio croissant). The woman at the counter was so friendly and patient as I browsed everything. We found this place as part of the AmazingCo Mystery Picnic, so what we got was predetermined (ham and Gouda cruffins, absolutely delicious), but we also ordered two Honey lavender iced lattes. They make their own syrup and sell it there and it's by far the best honey lavender latte I've had.

I want to come back and try more things ASAP!

Found this gem while visiting Dallas! This bakery is not so conspicuous. It's a small bakery but they have such a good selection of pastries. I have tried pistachio croissant, almond croissant, chocolate babka looking pastries (photo attached) and cinnamon roll. My favorites are the chocolate bread (I'm unsure of the name) and the almond croissant. The fillings are so good. They are also very generous with the ingredients. Prices range from 4-5 dollars per pastry. There was a mini line when I went on Sunday morning but I still recommend going there when they open as there are more selections to choose from!

It's hard to fathom this place has been open for six years and we just noticed it. Tucked away behind a suit store in West Village, Bisous Bisous has a tempting array of pastries. Of course, I had to try the fanciest, which turned out not to be sweet (although it was undoubtedly calorie-packed). A wonderful treat!

Pretty little bakery in uptown and friendly counter service. One customer at a time allowed but plenty of outdoor seating and easy parking. It smells amazing and the most popular items are almond croissants, scones and macarons. We were excited to try the kouign amann which is so hard to find. Flavors of macarons are different too.

Wonderful Patisserie!

This is the cutest little bakery with wonderful macarons and other sweet treats. I also loved their coffee. Don't miss this place in the Uptown area of North Dallas in West Village shopping area.

Yummy pastries

Very nice little patisserie in North Dallas. Macarons as well as many authentic European pastries of very high quality. This a billion times better than American cakes and cookies. Also very good coffee (espresso) drinks. Quite small and only a few tables, but you can take home.

Best coffee éclairs west of the Hudson River

Most éclairs you find in the US are either filled with crème pâtissière, crème Chantilly or chocolate so we were glad to find this tiny pâtisserie in Dallas West Village that serves coffee éclairs. Freshly made, the puff pastry shell should be chewy and moist and these were almost perfect. The coffee filling and icing could use a stronger flavor, but I guess you could order the éclair with a double espresso, all served by a friendly and engaging staff.
